OFFICIAL COURSE DESCRIPTION
Readings and discussion demonstrating the basic structural and technical elements of fiction with opportunities for practice and peer workshop.
Prerequisite: ENG 261 or consent of instructor.

REQUIRED MATERIALS:
There is no required book for this class. You will, however, be responsible for reading handouts and links to required stories for class discussion.

You will also spend money photocopying your original work for distribution to your peers for full class workshops. You will need lots of paper, inkjet cartridges, and dedication. I expect your copies to be on clean white paper, printed on one side only with good black ink, and stapled. Present your work with the dignity it deserves.

OBJECTIVES
There are two ways to begin thinking and writing like a fiction writer. The first is to write and we'll be doing lots of that. The second best way to become a writer is to read, so we'll be doing lots of that, too. But we won't be reading in the same way other classes have you read. We'll be reading as writers—with our focus on the craft and strategies that went into making the art. To meet that goal, we'll be breaking down the various elements of form and perspective and working on ways to use those elements in our own work. You will be required to write a considerable amount of fiction this semester and you must not be shy about sharing your work with classmates and editing their work as well. Learning to give and accept constructive criticism is an important step in becoming a writer (and really an artist of any sort). Expect to write three complete stories, workshop two of them in class, and give an in-class reading of the last. You will also actively engage in peer editing (and probably have some quizzes, too).

Here are the official Program Learning Outcomes for this course:

1.) The student will demonstrate close reading skills and recognize strategies used by professional creative writers.
2.) The student will employ techniques and strategies for crafting carefully composed, competent creative work.
3.) The student will articulate useful, critical editorial advice for peer writers.
4.) The student will demonstrate strategic revision on completed creative work.

That all boils down to a pretty simple goal (we can call them Student Learning Outcomes): you will read a number of professional stories and examine them for craft; you’ll write skillful, original stories and present them in workshop; you will treat your classmates’ work with respect and a keen editorial eye; and you’ll turn in a portfolio of polished, revised work. Sounds good to me!

Since I know you all want to do well as far as grades go, here’s the breakdown:

ATTENDANCE & PARTICIPATION

If you want to do well in this course, you should attend every class period. There will be numerous discussions, a few quizzes, group activities, and assorted in-class assignments. Your eventual grade will benefit from high attendance and active participation. I give everyone three free absences. (That’s a week worth of class.) After that, any absences will certainly mar your final grade.

If you let me know beforehand and have a reasonable excuse (serious illness, death in the family, etc), a limited number of absences beyond the freebies will be counted as excused; if you don’t get in touch with me, then it will be unexcused. In either case, being absent is not an excuse for missing assignments. You should either call a classmate or talk to me and find out what went on in class if you were not able to attend. If you miss more than three classes without a valid excuse, your attendance and participation grades will drop a full letter grade. If your absences are more than a fourth of class time, you will automatically fail the course. In other words, I give you a free week’s worth of classes to miss; use it wisely.

Don’t miss days on which you have work due or when your story is the focus of discussion.

I don’t accept late work and I don’t give extra credit.

The effort you put into assignments, group work, and class discussion will count toward your grade. If you are absent for either class discussion days or group work, your grade will be affected. If you doze, pass notes, use your cell phone, or act in a disruptive manner (specifically, talk while others are talking), expect your grade to suffer accordingly.

Tardiness is rude and annoys me more than you imagine. Be punctual. Every time you’re late for class, you lose points. No kidding; I keep track. For every two tardies, I’ll dock you an absence.

The official SFASU policy is stated at:
http://www.sfasu.edu/policies/class_attendance_excused_abs.asp.

READINGS
Most of the assignments (and any quizzes) relate to the stories and essays you’ll read for class discussion. Keep up with the readings; they are very important. We will be analyzing them carefully. I expect you to have read and thought about them before you come to class—and not in the five minutes before class begins.

HOMEWORK
There will be a variety of writing and reading assignments. Do them and you’ll improve your fiction and your grade. Don’t do them and both will suffer. I will be collecting journals from you this semester, but I will only read a specific portion of your entries. Every other week you will submit a brief paragraph entry on the craft topic/technique of your choice. This is also creative journal where you jot down ideas for stories or turns of phrase you want to use later. It’s not a personal journal or diary. Keeping a work journal is one of the best ways to hang on to your good ideas and have them bear fruit later. If you think good ideas will stick with you and you won’t forget them, you’ll forget them. Write it down. Make it a habit. Frequent journal keeping keeps writer’s block at bay. Trust me on this.

There will also be one Craft Analysis Essay where you’ll analyze one or two of the published stories we’ve discussed and explain an element that the author(s) uses successfully. Expect to quote from the story to back up your argument and use MLA format. Aim for about three pages for that assignment.

DETAILS
Pay particular attention to each assignment description. This should give you a good idea what I am looking for in each piece and the sort of errors I will mark. I will also go over this in class. Please note that if you fail to turn in a major assignment (a story, craft analysis, or the final portfolio), you will fail the course.

FORMAT
All in-class assignments must be written neatly in ink. Stories and out-of-class exercises must be printed by computer; no handwriting for those. Staple sequential pages together. Your work must be presented in a neat and professional manner. Don’t use an inkjet on its deathbed. If I can barely see the type, or it’s blurry, how can I enjoy the story?
FICTION
You’re going to write three stories this semester, two full-length stories (2000 to 4000 words) and one flash fiction (under 1000 words). I don’t forbid genre work (horror, sci fi, mystery, romance), but it must be fresh and original; writing tired formula stories is the trap of genre fiction. (It can be a trap in literary fiction, too; we’ll talk more about that!) I do ask that you avoid gratuitous sex, violence, or hateful characters. Notice the word gratuitous. Sometimes sex, violence, and hateful characters have their place in accomplished fiction, but it takes skill. This semester we’re here to hone our initial skills; if you want to write an homage to the Saw films after you’ve mastered the basics, go for it—but not for this class. If you really want to write a disturbingly graphic story, see me. Perhaps you’ll convince me that your skills are up to it and we’ll let the class decide if you succeeded. But you have to be pretty convincing.

GRADING
How will I grade creative work? It’s subjective, of course, but I give you some ground rules in both format and content that should clarify what I’m looking for. Effort counts, too. I don’t know who said it, but art really is 98% perspiration, 2% inspiration. Perspire a little—no, perspire a lot—and you’ll get an A. If you are spectacularly gifted and turn in sloppy work, you won’t get an A. The race isn’t won by the naturally swiftest; it’s won by the runner who trains the most productively. This course is for the writer-in-training. Consider me a coach.

PORTFOLIO
The last thing you hand in this semester will be an anthology of the work you produced this semester. I expect it to be revised work; nobody produces the sharpest stuff first time out. The work you write in September and October will reappear in December, but it must be in a more polished form. Save your early drafts. I want to see multiple versions, so I can compare how your manuscript has improved. We’ll talk more about this as the semester progresses, but my warning now is you must be prepared to revise. Writing is revision. (Say it again: writing is revision. It should be one of your mantras.) I also want a brief self-analysis of your work: your strengths, your weaknesses, your intentions, etc.

WITHHELD GRADERS SEMESTER GRADES POLICY
Ordinarily, at the discretion of the instructor of record and with the approval of the academic chair/director, a grade of WH will be assigned only if the student cannot complete the course work because of unavoidable circumstances. Students must complete the work within one calendar year from the end of the semester in which they receive a WH, or the grade automatically becomes an F. If students register for the same course in future terms the WH will automatically become an F and will be counted as a repeated course for the purpose of computing the grade point average.
STUDENTS WITH DISABILITIES
To obtain disability related accommodations, alternate formats and/or auxiliary aids, students with disabilities must contact the Office of Disability Services (ODS), Human Services Building, and Room 325, 468-3004 / 468-1004 (TDD) as early as possible in the semester. Once verified, ODS will notify the course instructor and outline the accommodation and/or auxiliary aids to be provided. Failure to request services in a timely manner may delay your accommodations. For additional information, go to http://www.sfasu.edu/disabilityservices/

ACCEPTABLE STUDENT BEHAVIOR
Classroom behavior should not interfere with the instructor’s ability to conduct the class or the ability of other students to learn from the instructional program (see the Student Conduct Code, policy D-34.1). Unacceptable or disruptive behavior will not be tolerated. Students who disrupt the learning environment may be asked to leave class and may be subject to judicial, academic or other penalties. This prohibition applies to all instructional forums, including electronic, classroom, labs, discussion groups, field trips, etc. The instructor shall have full discretion over what behavior is appropriate/inappropriate in the classroom. Students who do not attend class regularly or who perform poorly on class projects/exams may be referred to the Early Alert Program. This program provides students with recommendations for resources or other assistance that is available to help SFA students succeed.

ACADEMIC INTEGRITY (This is the official SFASU policy statement) Academic integrity is the responsibility of all university faculty and students. Faculty members promote academic integrity in multiple ways, including instruction on the components of academic honesty as well as abiding by university policy on penalties for cheating and plagiarism. Academic dishonesty includes both cheating and plagiarism. Cheating includes but is not limited to (1) using or attempting to use unauthorized materials to aid in achieving a better grade on a component of a class; (2) the falsification or invention of any information, including citations, on an assigned exercise; and/or (3) helping or attempting to help another in an act of cheating or plagiarism. Plagiarism is presenting the words or ideas of another person as if they were your own. Examples of plagiarism are (1) submitting an assignment as if it were one’s own work when, in fact, it is at least partly the work of another; (2) submitting a work that has been purchased or otherwise obtained from an Internet source or another source; and (3) incorporating the words or ideas of an author into one’s paper without giving the author due credit. Please read the complete policy at:

http://www.sfasu.edu/policies/academic_integrity.asp.

AND NOW FOR SOME GRUMPY WARNINGS:
I will fail the following:
- late major assignments (stories or essays)
- incomplete work
stories not presented in expected format stories with an abundance of uncorrected misspellings or typos (more than two per page)—professional editors have no patience with thoughtless errors. Neither do I.

Always keep copies of what you write for your own protection in the event your work should be lost or misplaced. It probably won’t be, but the general rule is save everything just in case.

SOME COMFORTING LAST WORDS
If you don't know, ask. If you can't remember, ask. If you panic, talk to me before the night before. Most importantly, relax.

I always give this advice: lose yourself in your art. It’s the best way to create something you are proud of and to which others respond. I believe that each of you can write interesting, well-crafted, perhaps astounding stories this semester.
Throw yourself into this course. Abandon your doubt. Focus and work hard.
Don’t take yourself too seriously but take your writing seriously.

Do this and you’ll have more fun and you’ll get a better grade. And you’ll be a better writer.
