Getting Started: Introductory material, Get Acquainted Exercise and Discussion Instructions, Quiz.

Week #1 -- August 27-September 2

PHI 153 is part of the university's Core Curriculum. As such, the work assigned in this course is designed to recognize the general goals of the Core and the specific objectives of the Philosophy discipline. Students will be introduced to the study of logic and reasoning and the role of thinking in our lives. They will also be introduced to the study of the nature and scope of philosophy.

Materials:

Required:

McGraw-Hill Connect Exercises (required)

You can purchase a code from the on-campus bookstore or from the nearby Jack Backers bookstore that will enable you to purchase access to an electronic version of the textbook and its interactive content. You can also purchase electronic access to the textbook and its interactive content directly.

You can find detailed rubrics for the Reflection Papers in the Getting Started folder in the Content Browser.

Reflection Papers

Your Reflection Paper is an opportunity for you to reflect on the readings and to develop your own thoughts about the material. You will be expected to engage in critical thinking, to identify and articulate your own ideas, and to support them with evidence from the readings.

Your Reflection Paper should be well-organized, with a clear introduction, body, and conclusion. It should be supported by evidence from the readings, and it should be written in a clear, concise, and well-structured manner.

The best way to contact me is through the "Mail" function within D2L. You can also contact me by regular email at ksalsbery@sfasu.edu. My office hours are Monday 10-12 and Tuesday 2-4, or by appointment.
